1. In late November Fukien authorities established intelligence stations in each pao* (100 families) in the coastal area between Foochow and Amoy. Each station consists of four persons secretly chosen from the pao by hsien authorities, and each is responsible for detection of anti-Communist activity in its area and prevention of the infiltration of Nationalist agents.
2. Between September and early November approximately 600 Taiwanese members of the Chinese Communist Party, graduates of the Military and Political University in Peiping, left Peiping and infiltrated Taiwan. Most of them found work in Nationalist Government agencies. Their aim is as follows:
 - a. To create dissension among Nationalist Government officials and employees.
 - b. To turn the troops against the Nationalist Government.
 - c. To collect intelligence on Nationalist Government plans and activities.

Comment. Probably pao (堡), a ward.
